#BuildaPresident and support the #MandelaDay Pledge

I am inspired by the legacy of Nelson Mandela; I am moved by his words 'it is in your hands now'. In signing this document, I pledge to be a good citizen, to speakout against social injustice and to lend a hand in building the South Africa he hoped to see. I pledge my voice to this legacy, to uphold a constitution that cadres of the liberation struggle worked for. I pledge my mind, to imagining a South Africa as set out in the Freedom Charter, my hands, to link with other hands in building a community that Nelson Mandela dreamt would be protected under the Bill of Rights. In signing this pledge I recognize that the time is now, that Mandela's long walk to freedom started with a few steps which I will follow. This pledge signifies my commitment to a better South Africa, one where social injustice is not condoned, but met with resistance. It signifies a new start for a generation born free. This pledge is one more blow to the struggle against all forms of oppression, including the destructive nature of corruption in our country. This is a call to leaders, who we have signed into power, to lead with integrity, to honour our judicial system, and to respect our constitutional democracy. I am inspired by the legacy of Nelson Mandela; "It is in our hands now!"
